WHEAT MARKET MOST BEARISH IN LONG TIME

Situation Requires Great Caution and Drop May Take Place at Any Time.

STOCK MARKET

Has Overbought Appearance and Uncertainty Due to the Foreign Situation.

(Supplied by Tomkinson, Forwood & Co., Merchants Bank Building, Hamilton.)

Chicago, Jan. 21.—Technically, the wheat market last night was regarded by some traders here as well as by those from outside markets, as the most bearish in months. All but a few of the largest bulls have unloaded. Big shorts have covered, and the public has been left with a heavy load.

The latter is not, however, having more high-priced wheat than ever known at this time of the year, except last year. They also have more profits on paper than on any buy the market has had in years, and are slow to take them. Should a general selling movement start, wheat prices might easily decline five cents in a few minutes, as bears seem to regard the situation as requiring caution.

Prices are at a point where good supporting orders are necessary. Should they fail profits of outsiders might rapidly disappear. Traders who never have been in the market are running it, the same as they recently did the war stocks—Herald.
